

REFUGEE RELIEF

They stream across the countryside, their homes destroyed, their lands ravaged, their families broken: they are the refugees of the Vietnam War, the endless parade of helplessness searching for something gone forever from their lives.

For the International Rescue Committee, the work of handling South Vietnam's 2½ million refugees (15% of the nation's population) began in 1954 with the exodus of North Vietnamese following the Geneva agreements.

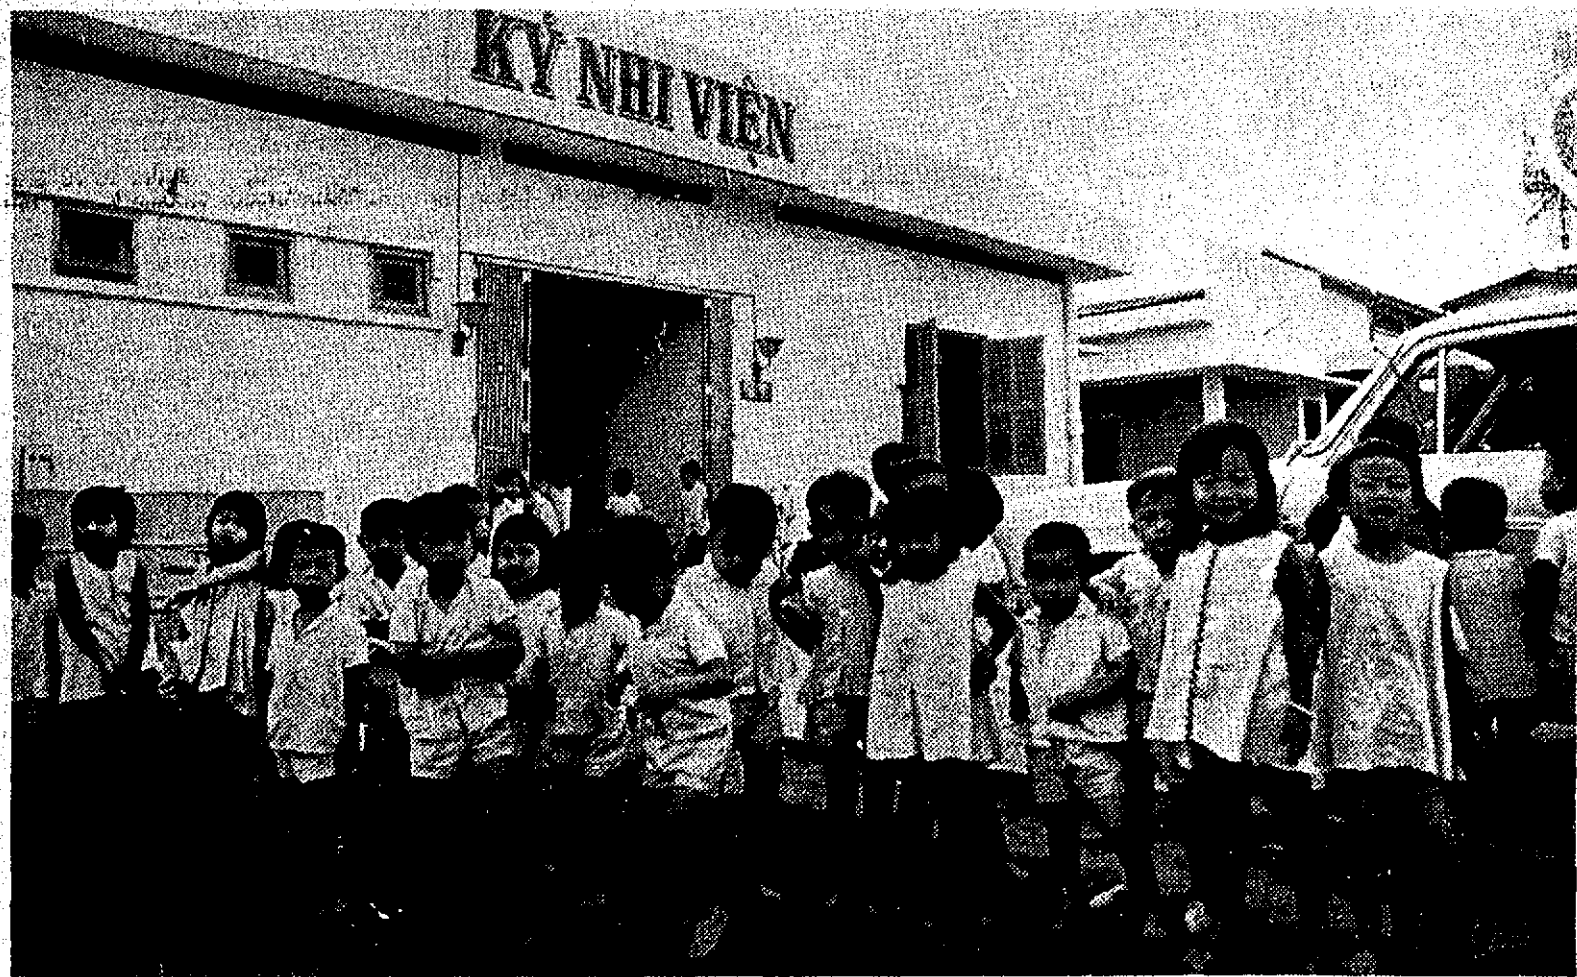

With the increase in war activity and its subsequent uprooting of more thousands, the effort of IRC became a salvation for the people.

Besides emergency relief, health and medical aid, public health activities and rehabilitation, IRC maintains five day-care centers for children and a community development program which serves as a model to future development within the nation.

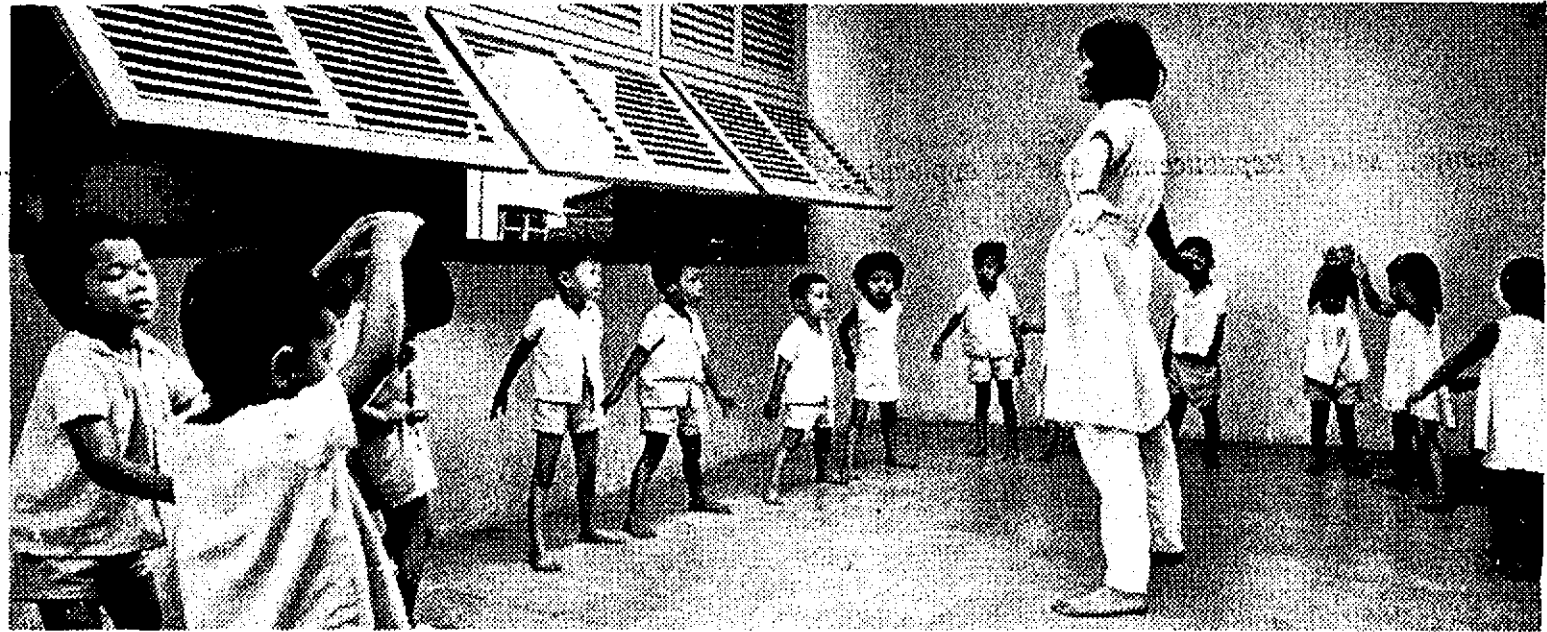

The day-care center at Vinh Hoi, Saigon, is under supervision of the Vietnamese Women's Association and, with the help of IRC personnel, pre-school age children are fed, clothed and given medical care within an educational environment.

Some 4,000 refugees, working under full-time personnel trained in agriculture, public health and teaching, are making a success of the Lai Thieu community development project, creating a stable, self-supporting and viable community to serve the needs of its occupants.

The children are bathed daily and there is food for their growing bodies; men and women once uprooted now raise crops and poultry; the sickness of the body and spirit has been cleansed by medicine and materials to work, to build, to grow. The refugees are not being forgotten.

Exercise builds young bodies under direction of an IRC instructor.

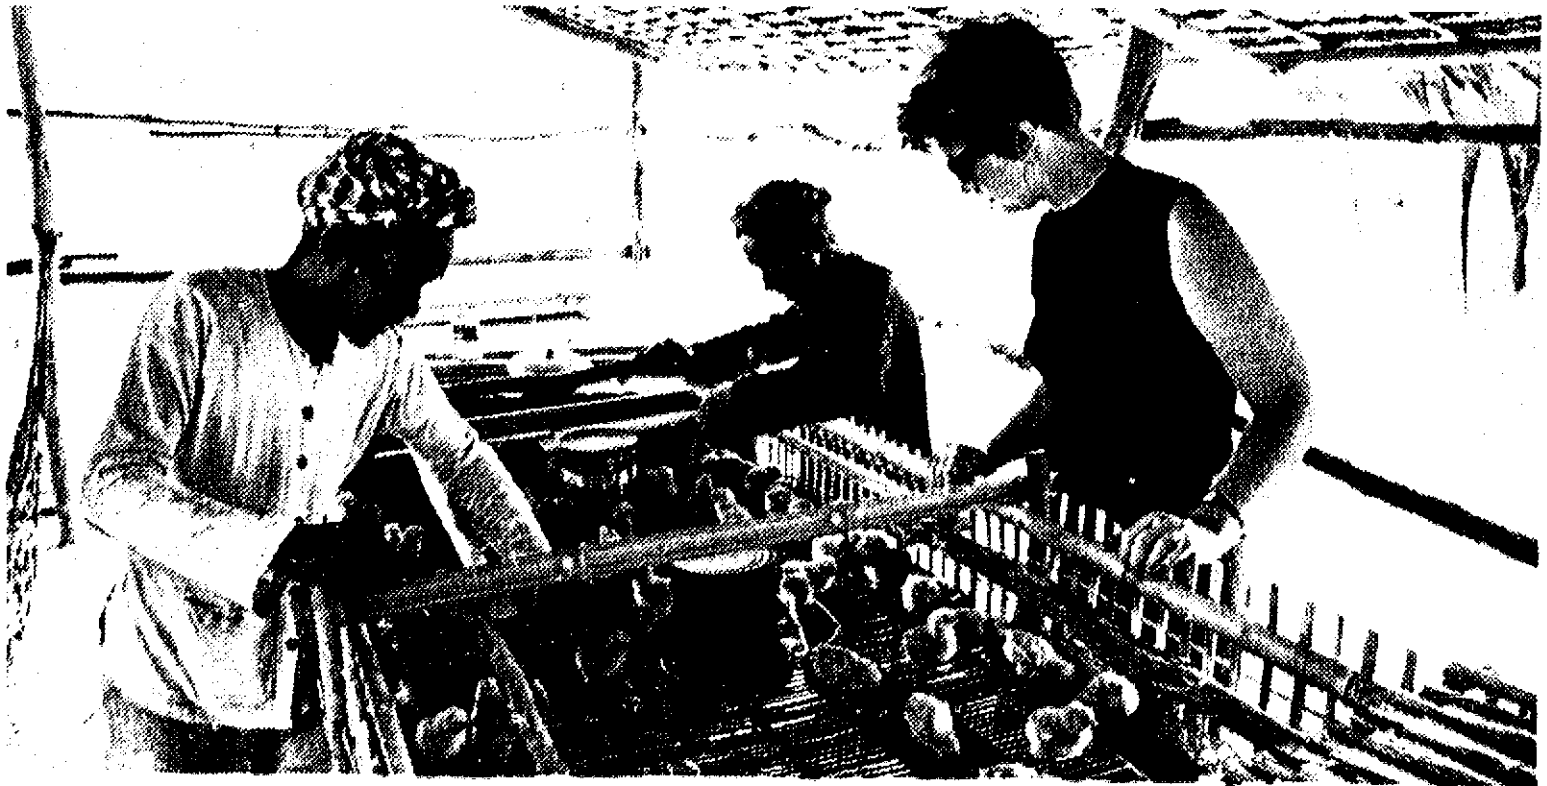

Refugees work on garden plots while Richard Thrams, agriculturist from Sunfield, Mich., looks on (background).

A child is examined by former Army medic Charles Cowden, Richmond, Ind., at the Lai Thieu dispensary.

Youth Beat

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

Bearding the Law: Bearded student wrangle headed for State Supreme Court in California. District court of appeals ruled that the beard of a (now) 17-year-old high school student is in violation of the school district's "good grooming" code and "would be definitely disruptive of educational process." The case has gone on for three years. Judge went on to say school district had right to set up and enforce a good grooming code in the public interest. Said: "The public derives benefit where public school students are trained in a classroom climate devoid of disruptive influences." American Civil Liberties Union is "in the case all the way," says boy's mother, "and so are we." The student started his growth at age 15 and has been denied admission to schools since the fuzz first appeared (he is a high achievement student).

TARS DON FEATHERS: Teenage Republicans (TARS) claim enormous growth figures in past year. Cite 100,000 members. Last summer over 8,000 interested high school students attended 37 state and five national teenage Republican "camps," selling Republicanism and its application to current issues and practical political action. Freshman Congressman Donald (Buz) Luhens (R. Michigan) is spearheading fund raising drive to promote further growth. About time. The Republican party needs all the youth image it can muster. We have urged both parties to endorse lowering the voting age to 18 years. Action, not talk, is needed.

DODGE MOTORS LEADING A CRUSADE: Ex-Michigan State football star Bob McCurry is leading a seahell crusade that shows teens "not so bad" after all. That's a full 4 per cent higher than their mothers. Most accidents happen close to home and at moderate speed. McCurry is pounding away on the "example" idea, urging adults to "set it." Dodge has a major highway safety program, "Operation Driver Excellence." The Amvets co-sponsor the project, and a new Dodge and $2,500 is scholarship money went to finalists competing in Chicago. Watch for the contest next year. It's a "handling" competition under controlled emergency stopping, handling, braking and maneuvering situations. Drivers are judged on elapsed-time basis. Excellent program and good fun, too.

Schools Protect Selves: In order to prevent school vandalizing, Albuquerque public schools are installing sonic detection devices. The devices pick up and transmit sounds to a central monitoring point, where the person on duty receives the alarms and can alert law enforcement agencies. Why don't other school systems take the clue? Might prevent a lot of the unfortunate destruction wreaked on schools by invading juveniles... those who forget that school is supposed to help, not hurt, them.

AIN'T GONNA STUDY WAR NO MORE: All indications show that teens have had it with war. A great ground swell of young opinions against war has risen. This human wave of discontent is now breaking on the shores of civilization and, like a tidal wave, it is destroying much that is in its path and engulfing many institutions along the way. How unfortunate that a basically good idea must be carried out in a violent manner. Adults want to know if there is a better way to end violence than with violence. Kids would like to know, too, and they are waiting for an answer. At any rate, strange things are happening nowadays. And youth shows no sign of letting up on the adult majority.

POPULATION EXPLOSION SERIOUS BUSINESS: Planning to marry and raise 10 children in the next decade or so?

Please don't! Dr. Paul R. Ehrlich, Stanford University biologist, can give you about 99 good reasons. One shocker is that, by the 1970s, there will be a worldwide time of famines, and even a drastic drop in the birth rate can't prevent it now. Also, he feels there will never be enough emigration to other planets to make much difference. At any rate, he predicts a great rise in the death rate due to starvation. The only possible help for it, he contends, is tremendous government publicity on birth control and its resulting effects.

Brown Plans to Plead Innocent

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Football star-turned-accused — Jimmy Brown says he'll plead innocent to a felony charge of battery against a peace officer.

The police force evidently made a mistake, Brown told newsmen Wednesday after a hearing was continued until Sept. 20 so he can make a movie in Spain. "I did not push an offcer." Because he is leaving the country, his bail was increased to $10,000. Authorities say Brown pushed to investigate reports of a disturbance at Brown's apartment June 9. Brown was accused of made a mistake, Brown told newsmen Wednesday after a hearing was continued until Sept. 20 so he can make a movie in Spain. "I did not push an off-

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

CAN HOODS CHANGE?

Dear Helen: I have been going with a boy for four months. He used to be a hood but he changed because I wanted him to. He stopped stealing and drinking. Until recently he had stopped fighting too.

But now he's back with his old gang, and they've started picking fights. His school work slipped again, and I'm afraid he'll get like he was before.

I think a lot of him and don't want him to go bad. How can I put him back on the right track?

—HELPLESS

Dear Helpless: It's time for an ultimatum. Tell this boy he can either have his hood gang or his non-hood girlfriend, but not both.

You risk losing him, true, but what have you lost? A weak fellow who would rather make trouble than make something out of his life. —H

Dear Helen: We didn't like your advice to the girlfriend of the boy who takes drugs and won't quit. You said she was headed for trouble and to drop him. We think she should work to save him. What if everybody dropped people who got involved in something wrong? Who would help them? —THE GIRLS

Dear Girls: A boy hooked on illegal drugs has a serious personality problem. He needs expert treatment, not tears and pleading from a sympathetic girlfriend. Her best help if a firm, "I like you, but I don't like the things you do, and so I can't go with you until they change." She will never "cure"

him with kindness. —H

Dear Helen: I'm sick and tired of the older generation's insults! My mother's friend sits at our house and goes on and on about how queer kids are today. She looked straight at me and said, "They're a bunch of long-haired hoodlums and the clothes they wear are disgusting."

I looked straight at her and said, "If you don't like my hair and clothes, why don't you leave?"

My mother grounded me for a week. If old people are disrespectful, why can't kids be, too? —FED UP

Dear F. U.: Good question, I guess your mother's answer is, "Respect your elders, even if they're wrong." Hope the reprimand was given for effect, and that she didn't really ground you for a whole week. —H

Dear Helen: Many girls complain about their younger brothers, and how they are nothing but PAIN.

Well I've got two brothers and I think they're the best. I'm 14, they're 12 and 11. They may get in the way when my friends are around, but they leave the room if I ask them. The older teases me but I know it's in fun. The younger teases me about my boyfriend and I just laugh along with him. George and John would do anything for me and I would do the same for them.

should not be painful. If done carefully, pain and bleeding are minimal. However, some patients are hypersensitive to any kind of instrumentation in and around the mouth. Sometimes these patients can be helped with application of topical "novocaine."

This is a type of local anesthetic that's applied directly to the gums by simply wiping it on and in seconds it reduces pain significantly.

Simultaneous Discoveries
The name of Alfred Wallace is associated with the theory of evolution, which was the same as Charles Darwin's. Both scientists published their discoveries at the same time, but Darwin finally became generally known as the founder of the theory.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Dear Dr. Lawrence: My teeth are wearing away at the necks, and deep grooves are forming. What causes this and how can I prevent it? These places are not decayed and don't hurt except when I brush my teeth or eat something hot or cold.

Answer: This is abrasion, or erosion of teeth. These yellow-brown, saucer-shaped, or sometimes knife-edged, grooves appear in the necks of teeth along the gum line. They occur in middle life or later, mostly in front teeth, and particularly the eye teeth.

Erosion makes teeth react to various stimuli, such as hot and cold because the protective cover of enamel has worn away, exposing highly sensitive dentin.

Natural defense of the affected teeth is to build up protective layers of secondary dentin inside the tooth. But the rate of erosion is usually faster than the rebuilding process and therefore eroded areas must be treated before they get deep enough to involve the nerve.

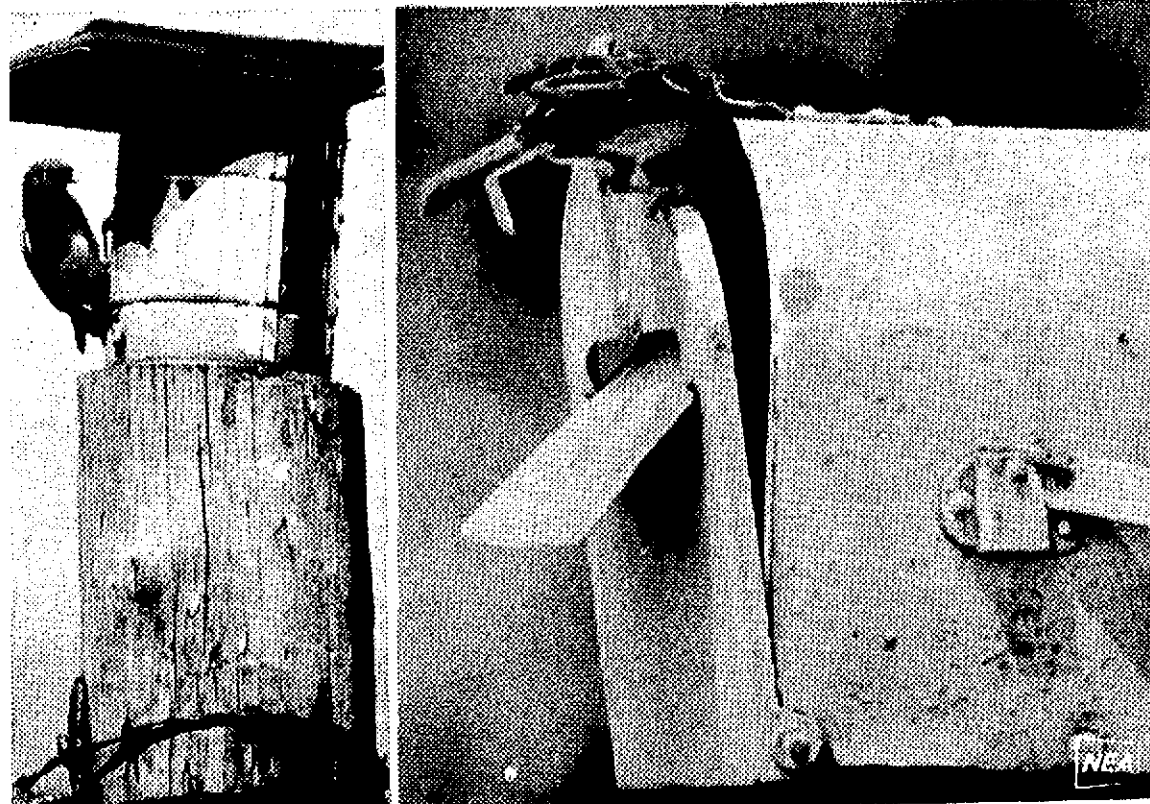

Sometimes it's enough to paint the sensitive areas with fluoride solution. Even though many coats may be necessary, treatment is simple and often quite effective. If this fails, they can be filled or entire tooth crown can be protected with porcelain cap.

Causative factors of erosion are unknown and therefore many causes, from "acid mouth" to grinding teeth at night, are suspect. But the most plausible is mechanical abrasion from too vigorous tooth-brushing.

At least one investigator has a more interesting theory. He claims that erosion of teeth occurs in people who show high emotional tension. He points to high incidence of abrasion of erosion in high-strung executives, and in divorcees.

Dear Dr. Lawrence: I dread having my teeth cleaned by the dentist. It hurts so. Is there some way to deaden the pain without getting an injection?

Answer: Teeth prophylaxis

HOME is where you find it and these birds apparently chose a modern metallic shelter over the traditional tree. Bluebird at left set up housekeeping in an old coffee can put out by 4H Club members at New Glarus, Wis., while an unused mailbox at St. Petersburg, Fla., became the stamping grounds for bird at right.

Part-score bidding is sort of a stepchild in bridge writing. There is a good reason for this. When each side has a part score, the competition increases and everyone hates to give up.

NotebookPORT MOLLER, Alaska — (NEA)—The shape of Alaska is like the head of some Ice Age mastodon, and the peninsula is the trunk that stretches through the bitterly cold seas toward Siberia.This is the land of Jack London and Robert Service, a primordial land of glacier-hewn mountains and active volcanoes that belch smoke and ashes. Your last real touch with civilization is the DC-3 that ferries you down the peninsula from Anchorage. Port Moller is three-quarters of the way down that silver of land, and aside from the anomalous radar gear of a U.S. Air Force installation, it is nothing more than a fin de siecle fishing village.But the adventure really begins when you board a Super Cub for Wildman Lake
Camp, a hunting and fishing outpost owned by Ron Hayes.The base camp, rustic by Park Avenue standards, is comfortable and—best of all—smack in the middle of some of the finest hunting and fishing on the North American continent.In the morning you can ramble through the tundra-like gorse and shoot a brace of ptarmigan for dinner. And in the evening you fish right out your back door for Dolly Varden trout that run three to five pounds.But the big game is bear, the monstrous Alaskan brown bear. And this is the story of American sportsman Jim Rik-hoff and the one that almost made the record books.Hunting the Alaskan brownie is done by the classic stalking method, although most of your time is spent sitting on your haunches, glassing the surrounding mountainsides for bear signs.On the morning of the fifth day, Rikhoff and his guide, beard-branded Jeff Graham, began their hunt at first light.Toward noon, sitting on a high ridge, they spotted a huge bear crossing a creek bed in the valley below. The bear was headed up the mountainside.Out of breath from the high altitude (8,000 feet), they stumbled across the rugged terrain on a line that they hoped would intercept the bear's course. It did. All of a sudden, there he was, all 900 pounds of him, coming straight up toward them, less than 125 yards away."My God, there he is!
Shoot!" Graham hissed.Rikhoff centered the cross-hairs of the scope on the bear's forehead. By the time the noise of the muzzle blast had ricocheted from the crag, the 300-grain bullet had thudded home and the giant lay crumpled in a mammoth furry heap.It took two hours to skin out the huge pelt—10 feet, six inches from claw to claw when spread out at the shoulder.co, Calif.; one brother, Mr. Norman Smith of Hope. Numerous grandchildren, great grandchildren and other relatives.Funeral services will be held at Providence Baptist Church,
Emmet, Arkansas Sunday June 23, at 2:00 p.m. Burial will be in Providence Cemetery. Hicks
Funeral Home Inc., is in charge."SINGLE CLUE DID IT"
NEW DELHI (AP) — A merchant left his bag containing 35,000 rupees ($4,900) in the tonga (a horse-drawn carriage) in which he rode to work. The only clue he could give detectives was that the driver kept murmuring a Hindu-Moslem unity slogan.Two detectives went to a few major tonga stands with that clue, and the tonga was soon located, along with the money bag, which the tonga driver had not noticed.S.F., 42; Perez, Cin., 41.

Game Still in 'Shape'

By TOMMY THOMAS
NEA Sports Writer

"The best-looking prospect in women's tennis is gorgeous Gertrude Moran of California. Her game's improving rapidly and there never was anything wrong with her form."

—SPORT magazine, June, 1948.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Gussie Moran plays tennis only once or twice a week these days, but there's still nothing wrong with her form. She no longer wears pigtales and lace panties at Wimbledon but people still think of her as "Gorgeous Gussie."

She's off to London to watch the Wimbledon for the first time since playing there in 1950. Although she writes a column for Club & Sports magazine and sells advertising for World Tennis, she really doesn't get a big boot out of playing any more.

"I find myself thinking, 'Thank goodness there's just one more set,'" she says. "I actually prefer swimming or walking to playing tennis. For me the greatest thing about Wimbledon is just being back in London again."

Gussie created somewhat of a furor her first time there when a friend, a photographer named Robert Rider-Rider, snapped her picture. She was wearing the soon-to-be-famous lace panties and pretending to pull off her sweater. It was supposed to be a gag shot, for the photographer's private collection. It appeared next morning in the London papers and everywhere else in the world and Gussie received a cable from her mother: "What are you doing over there?"

"It was no publicity gimmick," she says. "People just made a big thing out of me wearing lace panties in a tennis match. Actually, I never was the flamboyant type, not even the outdoor type. I would rather sit in bed and read a book. People have me mixed up."

Gussie thinks the people in tennis have the sport a little mixed up, too.

"Open tennis will be fantastic for the gate at Wimbledon," she says. "But the sport will never become as successful as golf until it gets an image. The only kind of image it has now is Pancho Gonzales, who is over the hill."

"The best thing that could happen right now would be

"She's better than Billie Jean because she's got the ground strokes, and they'll beat a net rusher most of the time. She can handle anything that comes to net. She's also more exciting and interested the mixed doubles. But she's content to serve as a for a feud to develop between Billie Jean King and Nancy Richey. Let's face it, they've got to jazz the game up a little. Maybe put a moat around the court so a player falls into it if he overruns. And if that gets boring, well, maybe put alligators in the moat.

"But seriously, tennis—especially pro tennis—is show biz. But most of the female players look pretty unfeminine. Billie Jean is wonderful to the little kids who seek advice. But she tells them she carries about eight extra pounds because it helps to hit the ball harder. So now she has these little girls overeating and looking like little wrestlers."

"And Rosemary Casals, another pro, dresses just like Billie Jean—unfeminine skirt and blouse. They all look like English washerwomen."

Gussie's theory is that tennis fans are duers and would rather participate than speculate. That's why many of them are playing tennis somewhere themselves instead of going to the tournaments.

"And the real enthusiasts come to watch the men," she says. "They're the backbone of the sport. The females just sort of add frosting to the cake. But it's also important that the men develop some images. Perhaps Arthur Ashe could become a good one."

She considers Nancy Richey

commentator for a radio network, sending Wimbledon reports back to the United States.

Startlingly simple was the defense offered by a young man accused of murdering his own father.

"I'm a rough character," he conceded in court, "but only because my father brought me up that way. He taught me to drink whiskey, use a gun, and run around with a gang. So don't blame me for what I did. Blame my father."

No doubt the slain father bore a share of the fault. But the court held the son guilty anyhow, because he was old enough and rational enough to take responsibility for his own behavior.

To what degree should extenuating circumstances excuse what would otherwise be a crime? To what degree should a killer be allowed to blame his upbringing? a thief his poverty? a rapist his passion? a vandal his youthfulness?

In an earlier day, there was little of such talk in the courtroom. Wrong brought retribution almost as a matter of course. Scarcely a century ago, a murderer was put to death in an American prison even though he was only 12 years old.

But with greater insight into human motivations, have come greater understandings in living blame.

ROCHESTER, N.Y.—(NEA)—The name is Lee Buck Trevino. The title he holds is United States Open champion. And in the red room, on the top floor of the Oak Hill Country Club, where a guy named Bucky was springing for Margaritas, the blackboard was chalked: "Lee T. El Mejor Jugador."

Which means simply, "The best player."

From here on in, it's his story:

I first started playing golf with a broomstick swinging at horse apples. One day I found an iron at the Glen Lakes Club, where we lived in Dallas, and then some balls in the rough. I guess I started swinging a club when I was six.

As far as I ever got in school was the eighth grade. I had to go to work. I never knew my father. I was raised in a frame house without electricity or water.

I caddied five or six years. I'd sneak onto the course and play a few holes till they ran me off. I never played a complete 18 holes of golf until I was 15, and then I shot a 77.

My real start in golf was when Hardy Greenwood gave me a job on a par-three course in Dallas. I worked for him before I went into the Marines the latter of 1957 and again when I got out in 1961. I made buck sergeant swinging those golf clubs in Okinawa.

I applied for a Class A card, which means I had to pay $110. Hardy Greenwood said he wouldn't sign it, and I said, "Why not?"

He said, "I don't believe you're ready for it." Which was probably the best thing for me, because I'd still be at that par-three course. I quit and went out to El Paso, where I got $30 a week and whatever I could make from lessons.

The 1967 U.S. Open started me on the tour. I had $600 in my pocket and an airplane ticket when I came to Baltusrol. We borrowed $400 of it. My wife had $20 back home. We never had a bank account. I didn't have a necktie and couldn't get into the motel dining room. I had to walk down the highway to a pizza place to eat.

But I shot 283 and made $6,000.

So my wife and little girl, Leslie, who's now 3, joined me and we went to St. Paul, where I made $800 and the western, where I made $200. They were stuck in a motel room. When I should have been practicing, I was taking my little girl to the park. So I said, "Why don't you go home and let me practice a little?"

They took a jet, and I went to Hartford and made $2,150, then $8,150 at Westchester and $2,325 at the Carling. And I said, "How long has this been going on?"

I finished only twice out of the money last year and made $30,000.

I didn't save any of it—remember, we didn't have a bank account. But I bought a one-third interest in the Horizon Hills Country Club where I was teaching. We live in a motel at the club; it has a kitchenette and a room on each side. We sleep in one, the three of us. Our two dogs sleep in the living room. But the price is right.

In three weeks, we'll move into a $30,000 Spanish-type house on the 18th fairway.

I've been married twice. I get rid of them when they're 21. My wife turned 21 in January, so she better look out. I have a little boy, Richard Lee Trevino, who's six, by my first wife, and he lives in Columbia, Mo. I flew him and his mother and her husband to Dallas last Christmas because they couldn't afford it. I only saw him a couple of hours but believe me it was worth it.

I didn't call my wife Claudia right after I won the Open. She was probably crying. Hell, she saw me on television. She knows I won.

I feel great. Show me a guy wouldn't feel great who just won the U.S. Open. It means a whole lot. You qualify for the Open and the PGA and World Series of golf. They'll probably drop the World Series of Golf now. It's like owning a pumpkin farm, and they knock off Halloween.

Before the week of the Open started, I said to myself I didn't have a chance unless it rains. I consider myself a good mudder. I don't hit the ball very high because I learned to play golf on hard pan where you can't get under it. The good Lord blessed me. It rained and it rained.

I have a lot of confidence in my game, although I have a bad swing.

A guy in Houston gave me a good luck piece. It says "Adventures of Alice" on it. I've been playing like hell ever since. The Open means a whole bunch of money. I'm the happiest Mexican alive. I'm going to buy the Alamo back and give it to Mexico. If they don't charge too much.

Right now, I don't have any endorsements. No golf balls, no shoes, no clubs, no bags, no clothes. I didn't want to sign anything. I think it was good business on my part. I felt I was right on the edge of winning a golf tournament.

And so Lee Buck Trevino, 28 years old, came to Rochester with four neckties and six sports coats. When he left, he could afford to write his caddy, Kevin Quinn, a check for $2,000.

He said in parting, "You've wrote a lot of funny stories about me. And I've told you some."

But no story beats the saga of El Mejor Jugador.

creasingly taken into account—not only in deciding on legal guilt but also in setting the punishment. And all states recognize a minimum age below which a person cannot be held to criminal liability.

Nevertheless, while today's law avoids total responsibility, it also avoids total irresponsibility. It holds that most people, in most situations, do indeed have freedom of choice between doing right and doing wrong.

Because of that freedom, an individual is expected to stand on his own feet, be his own man, and "take his medicine" for what he does wrong—just as he is entitled to take credit for what he does right.

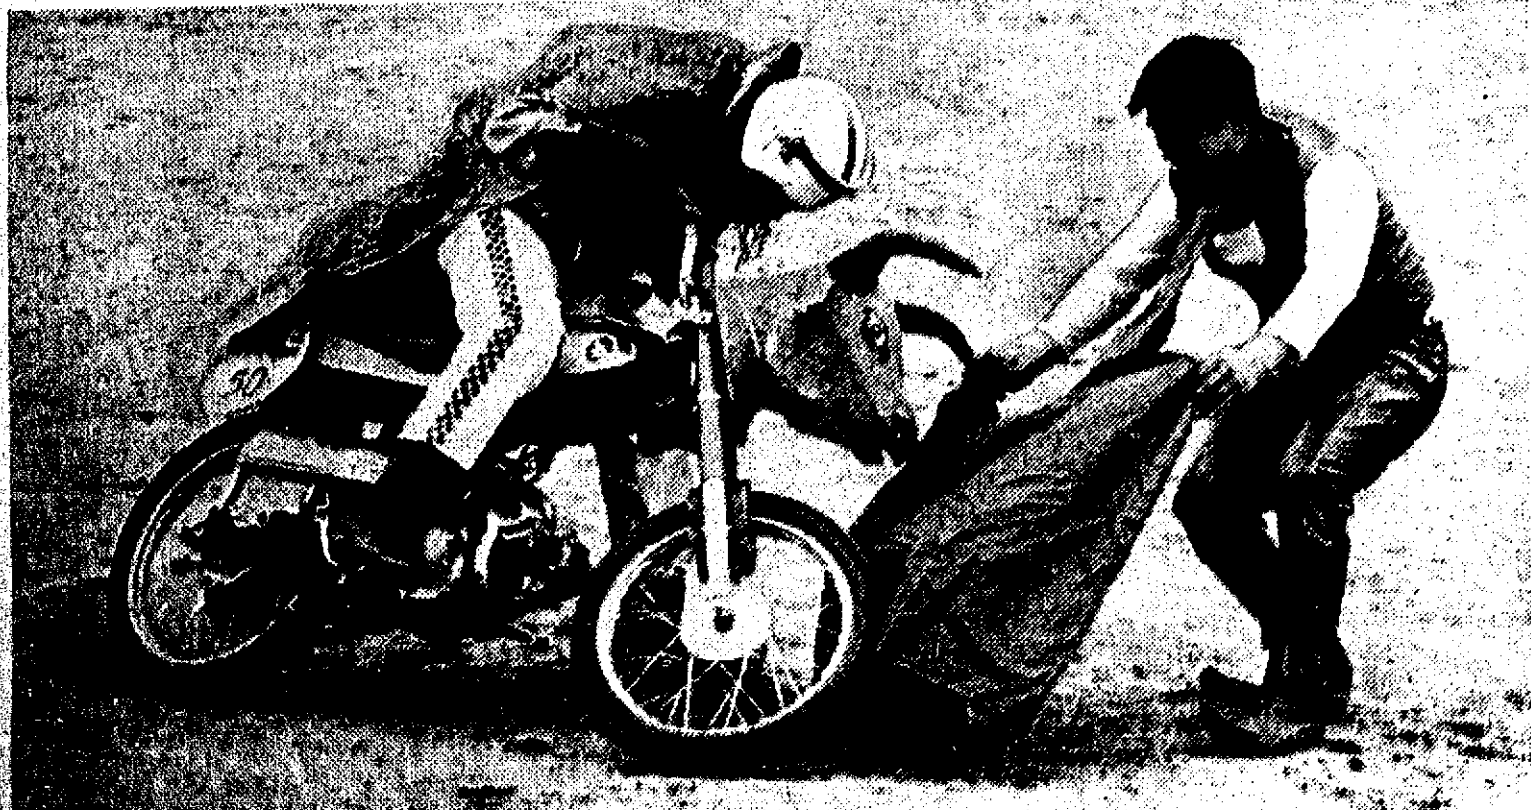

In short, despite outer influence or inner weakness, despite the pressure of adversity or the lure of temptation, he usually has the power to refrain from harming others—if he tries hard enough.

And, for the sake of society, the law demands that he try that hard.

North Korea Claims U.S. Ship Sunk

LONDON (AP) — North Korean Radio claimed that North Korean patrol vessels sank a U.S. "spy ship" today, U.S. "spy ship" today.

The broadcast said: that the ship was sunk with its entire crew.

"Naval patrol vessels of our Korean Peoples Army (KRA) sank an enemy spy boat which intruded into the vicinity of Pukpo Harbor," the radio said.

"U.S. Imperialist troops committed sustained provocative acts on land and sea and in the air and have again perpetrated a burglarious provocative act by infiltrating a spy ship into the vicinity of Pukpo Harbor at around 0100 hours today, with its mother spy ship anchored in the vicinity of Yompyong Island in the western sea.

"Naval patrol vessels of our KRA promptly responded and sank the intruding spy ship together with its entire crew."

The name of the alleged spy ship was not given, nor was the name of the mother vessel.

The reported sinking came nearly six months after the U.S. Navy's intelligence ship Pueblo and her crew of 83 were captured by four North Korean patrol boats and taken to the port of Wonsan.

The North Koreans charged that the Pueblo was "carrying out hostile activities" in North Korean territorial waters.

The United States said the Pueblo was outside the 12-mile limit claimed by North Korea.

The ship and crew still are in North Korean custody.

The Japanese Kyodo news agency which also monitored the North Korean report in Tokyo said the vessel was identified as a "U.S. imperialism forces spy ship." Kyodo said it was not clear whether this referred to an American or a South Korean ship.

Kyodo said the report claimed the crew was thrown into the water but did not specify whether they had been picked up.

Nixon Is Using Soft Technique

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Richard O. Nixon is using the soft answer technique to parry Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's demands for more head-to-head fighting in their rivalry for the Republican presidential nomination.

Rockefeller said Thursday in Cleveland he wants Nixon and him to be judged side by side, trading charges and countercharges, challenges and rebuttals.

The New York governor said he wants to "sharpen the differences between us, if he gives me the chance."

Nixon shows little interest in offering Rockefeller such opportunities. Political observers rank Nixon as the front-runner in the race, Rockefeller as the one who has to come from behind.

"As far as Gov. Rockefeller is concerned," Nixon told newsmen in Chicago, "he can continue his attacks. I will not retaliate in kind."

As part of his campaign to draw Nixon into returning fire, Rockefeller began criticizing him by name for the first time Thursday. He suggested the former vice president, on the basis of his losing try for the presidency in 1960, has shown he can't win the city vote.

"Dick did well in Missouri until he got into St. Louis," Rockefeller told the GOP meeting in Cleveland. "He did well in Pennsylvania until he got into Philadelphia. He did well in Michigan until he got into Detroit. And he did well in New York until he got into New York City."

Nixon said he is sticking to his position of refusing to debate Rockefeller.

"The only real winner of a Nixon-Rockefeller debate, particularly the kind of debate that seems to be developing, would be Hubert Humphrey," he said.

Vice President Humphrey, appearing at the National Press Club Thursday, said national club priorities need to be re-examined—changed if necessary.

"It must be clear that violence, crime, looting, burning cannot be condoned and must be stopped," he said. "It must be equally clear that the conditions that breed crime and violence have to be sought out—and then rooted out."

Masses, Rich Separated by Fashion

By JEA N SPRAIN WILSON

AP Fashion Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Fashion has always separated the rich from the masses. But never more so than now.

Indeed by fall it will be possible to tell wealthy women, not only by their furs and gems but also by the width of their skirts and the length of their sleeves. The less expensive clothes will be barer, tighter, and shorter.

This lesson in economics was taught Thursday as the New York Couture Group held its second day of fall collection previews.

Two years ago hardly more than 1 in every 1,000 women could afford to pay the prices of the high fashion houses—that is, more than $100 for a dress.

Today there may be even fewer. Union wage contract increases will result in another 7 to 10 per cent hike in prices, said Vincent Monte-Sano, president of the Monte-Sano, Pruzan Coat and Suit House.

And as modesty increases, costs go up for the couture customer. Obviously it takes more fabric to cover a female from her throat to her wrists and at least to her knees than it does a miss in a minidress with a barely-there top. Those billow bias, or pleated skirts, glamorous and graceful as they are, gobble up yardage, too. And more fabric means fancier prices.

Murder Warrant Is Issued

LAKE VILLAGE, Ark. (AP)

—A first-degree murder warrant has been issued for Alfred James, 45, of Portland (Ashley County), Sheriff Max Brown of Chicot County said Thursday.

He said James is wanted in connection with the stabbing death Wednesday of Rosie Lee White, 63, of Lake Village. She was slain in the restaurant where she lived, Brown said.

Authorities searched in the area between Montrose and Portland in eastern Ashley County but did not locate James, Brown said.

Pueblo May Be Issue in Campaign

By LEWIS GULICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly five months after the North Korean seizure of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo and its men, the incident is becoming something of a campaign issue.

A Republican party document lists the Pueblo affair as the most dramatic illustration of its charge that America's might has weakened and its prestige abroad crumpled under Democratic leadership.

A fledgling Remember the Pueblo Committee is trying to drum up support among Republicans and candidates for its call to use force if necessary to free the ship and its imprisoned crew.

Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford says patient negotiations, not precipitate action, will ultimately win back the vessel and its 82 surviving crewmen.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, running for the Democratic presidential nomination, has seen "some indication" the North Koreans may release the captives but has not gotten into specifics.

The administration reports no progress in the lengthening negotiations of Panmunjom over their return.

According to the U.S. version this is what happened in the crisis-provoking incident of Jan. 23:

The 906-ton Pueblo, a World War II Army cargo ship recently recommissioned with the latest electronic eavesdropping gear, was patrolling 17 miles off North Korea's Wonsan harbor at midday when a North Korean sub chaser showed up.

The gunboat signaled "Heave to or I will open fire."

The Pueblo's reply: "I am in international waters."

An hour later three more North Korean naval vessels joined the sub chaser. With MIG jet fighters zooming overhead, the sub chaser then backed toward the Pueblo and an armed boarding party went aboard the American ship.

The Pueblo was armed only with 50-caliber machine guns and had been under instructions to keep her weapons covered.

The captain, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher and his men did not engage in a naval battle, but there was apparently some fighting during the boarding.

Before Pueblo's radio went silent, it reported several men were wounded. The crew destroyed all the secret equipment they could.

Hanoi Still Trying for Concessions

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

AP Special Correspondent
PARIS (AP) — The dispute between the United States and North Vietnam over whether they are making progress in the Vietnam peace talks springs from their basic conflict of purposes at this stage of the negotiations.

North Vietnam is still trying to maneuver President Johnson into granting a new concession by putting an end to all attacks on North Vietnamese territory.

The United States is trying to maneuver Hanoi into making a concession of its own by curtailing infiltration of troops into South Vietnam.

Public opinion all over the world, but especially in the United States, is regarded by each side as a weapon to be used against the other in this struggle.

Hanoi, speaking through Ambassador Xuan Thuy and the rest of its negotiating team, obviously regards pessimism as its most effective public opinion lever.

The theme which Thuy and his spokesmen have been sounding for weeks is that the talks are making no progress because the United States refuses to stop attacking North Vietnam. The way to move toward peace, they argue, is to end the attacks.

On the other hand, U.S. officials have emphasized every indication of movement in the discussions. Their theme has been that in spite of the deadlock slight progress has been made in laying the groundwork for more serious future peace negotiations.

Rap Brown Is Replaced by Student Group

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN

Associated Press Writer
NEWARK (AP) — Philip

Hutchings, a soft spoken, young black organizer in Newark has been chosen to succeed Rap Brown as leader of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

An informant in the Negro community here said of the change, "SNCC seems to want to get away from the cult of personality that Brown and Stokely Carmichael developed and go back to the unglamorous but necessary job of organizing grass-roots people around specific programs."

Hutchings, 26, is reliably reported to have been elected at a meeting last weekend in Atlanta, the group's headquarters.

SNCC has refused to confirm the story for "the white press," but those who have worked closely here with Hutchings for the past three years have confirmed it. Hutchings himself has been unavailable for comment.

The post itself has been changed to signal the new direction of the financially hard-pressed Black Power organization.

Hutchings will be "program coordinator," not "chairman," a post which has been abolished.

Brown, who served as chairman since May 1967, reportedly did not seek re-election. He was recently sentenced to five years in prison on a federal firearms charge. The sentence is under appeal.

That Hutchings' name is unfamiliar is not surprising. He has worked quietly in Newark on the sort of grassroots organizing that was SNCC's primary activity before Carmichael took over two years ago.

Hutchings came to Newark three years ago following a brief stint as a SNCC field worker in Georgia and Tennessee. He had previously dropped out of Howard University where he was a classmate of Carmichael.

His initial work in Newark was with SNCC's white counterpart on the New Left. Students for a Democratic Society and its founder, Tom Hayden. Then he became the head SNCC field worker in Newark.

Hutchings appears to depart from Brown and Carmichael on the question of working with whites. Since Brown and Carmichael took over, no whites have held staff organizing positions with SNCC.

June Is Month for Bridegrooms Too But Girls Call the Shots

By MARY ANITA LASETER

Star Feature Writer

June is the month of brides. By the same token, June is the month of bridegrooms. It could hardly be any other way.

But all year long in 1968 it has been the girls who have called the shots. Before some masculine cynic growls, "Don't they always?" We hasten to explain that the reference is to this being a Leap Year.

There are various theories about the origin of this custom which, supposedly, entitles the girl to pop the question, but no one agrees entirely with any other. Some desperate female may have invented the whole idea because of a reluctant, reticent Romeo. Whoever contrived the plan was smart enough not to attach her name to it with the result that Leap Year is now Tradition.

So much for the preliminaries. Now for the main event.

Though the wedding seems to be an all-women affair, by all reports, we realize that such a thing could not be. In fact, one set of Bridal Information that came our way went so far as to state, "While your radiant bride will be the center of attention at your wedding, it's the glowing groom, correctly attired, which provides the perfect complement that enhances the elegance of the entire event."

As for the engagement ring, that, too, is in the hands of the man—briefly. If he is smart, he will take his girl to select it AFTER he has explained to the jeweler about the price range his pocketbook can support.

Why the usual choice of a diamond? It's all Max's fault. . . . Archduke Maximilian of Austria. The diamond ring was given as a result of a note Maximilian received from his adviser when the marriage was being arranged. "At the betrothal Your Grace must have a ring set with a diamond and also a gold ring."

Who was the girl? Thought you'd never ask. She was Mary of Burgundy, and their engagement was one of the shorter ones in history. Max got to the palace at Ghent on August 17, 1477, asked Mary to marry him, put a diamond ring on her finger, and they were wed the next morning.

For a final wedding note in the masculine we look to the reception and the tiered wedding cake. That's right. It was the original idea of a French chef, or so the story goes.

In Medieval England it seems that wedding guests brought gifts of little sweet buns. These were pyramided on a table and served as part of the refreshments after the ceremony. A Frenchman touring England at that time liked the idea, so he took it home but made some revisions. Instead of individual cakes, he made one large cake stacking succeeding smaller layers to achieve the pyramid effect and frosting the whole thing.

There you have our tribute to the men in June. Where would weddings be without them!

Clifford, McNamara Differ Some

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford

has revealed for the first time a significant difference in views from his predecessor, Robert S. McNamara.

The dispute came to light Tuesday when Clifford told a news conference that the United States should push ahead with development of the Sentinel anti-missile system, something opposed by McNamara when he was secretary of defense.

The $5 billion Sentinel program, the so-called "thin missile" system, is designed to protect the United States from the relatively small-scale Red Chinese nuclear attack, thought possible by the mid-1970s.

"I believe we should have a defense against the Chinese system other than just a massive retaliatory attack," Clifford said in opposing current moves in Congress to cut funds for the Sentinel program.

McNamara's position was that the United States should concentrate on building the strength of its offensive missile program to the point where neither China nor the Soviet Union would dare attack.

He argued that there were only "marginal grounds" for concluding that a relatively light antimissile system would be effective.

When McNamara finally gave his authorization to the program last September it was with evident lack of enthusiasm and after President Johnson reportedly forced the issue.

There are grounds to believe that Clifford, then as now a close advisor to Johnson, threw decisive weight with the President in behalf of the go ahead.

However, Clifford, who succeeded McNamara March 1, appeared to agree with the former secretary in his opposition to a more complex and heavier antimissile system designed to protect against Soviet attack.

McNamara had said such a system would cost up to $40 billion and still would be relatively ineffective in saving American lives.

Clifford said Thursday that "I am informed by our experts that there is no known defense at this time to a massive attack from the Soviet Union."

But he departed from McNamara in another respect; that U.S. installation of an antimissile system might trigger another round in the nuclear arms race.

He said he hoped the Russians had realized "the time has come for us both to . . . act reasonably" and agree on nuclear arms limitation.

But, Clifford said, the United States cannot let the Soviet Union think it is stronger than America.

Some Against LBJ Picking New Justice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three

Republican senators say they will oppose any effort by President Johnson to name a new chief justice of the Supreme Court after Earl Warren steps down.

"For a 'lame duck' president to designate the leadership of the Supreme Court for many years in the future would break faith with our system and would be an affront to the American people," Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., told the Senate.

"With the court in adjournment and the American people about to pick a new administration which may considerably reorient the philosophy of our national government, it would be a major mistake to presume today to fill such an important post," said Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., agreed with both of them, adding he was "delighted to hear Chief Justice Earl Warren will be retiring from the Supreme Court. I have long favored such a move."

All three commented Friday in the wake of authoritative reports that Warren had written Johnson of his intention to bow out after 15 controversial years that saw the barriers of school segregation tumble and guarantees of the rights of individuals vastly expanded.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said he believes the elevation of an associate justice to chief justice needs Senate confirmation, as was done in 1941 when Franklin D. Roosevelt nominated Harlan Fiske Stone to succeed Charles Evans Hughes.

"The Constitution says nothing about that specific point, spelling out only the need for Senate confirmation of a justice."

Both Johnson and Warren, however, surely are mindful that it was the Senate that spearheaded in recent weeks the attack on the court that resulted in the omnibus crime control bill Johnson signed into law the past week.

Some provisions of the bill are intended to overturn court decisions that restricted the admissibility of confessions as evidence and eyewitness identifications made in police lineups.

Despite the comments in the Senate, there was praise for Warren Friday.

Arthur J. Goldberg, who left a position on the court to become U. S. ambassador at the United Nations, called him "one of the greatest chief justices in the history of the United States."

Warren served for 11 years as Republican governor of California, but that state's Democratic House Speaker, Jesse M. Unruh, said Warren's "contribution to the nation and the ideals for which it stands are incalculable. He is a great Californian, a great American and a great chief justice."

California Gov. Ronald Reagan's immediate reaction was "I wish he had waited until January so his successor could be appointed by a Republican president."

Warren himself plans to return to California Tuesday for a summer vacation. In the court tradition, he has been silent on the whole matter of retirement, as have his aides.

Speculation on why the 77-year-old Warren chose this particular time to step down centered on the belief he wished to ensure the liberal tradition of his court, which President Johnson has mostly supported.

Piccadilly Circus to Streamline

LONDON (AP) — Piccadilly

Circus, London's tourist and night life center with a naked statue of the god of love in the middle, will be streamlined with underground traffic, new buildings and hotels, the Greater London Council announced Thursday.

The plan to give the downtown traffic circle a new look will keep the present bright lights and the famed statue of Eros—a winged figure with a bow and arrow.

The work will begin, the council said, in about three years.
